PREFACE

This publication was prepared to satisfy the many requests made of the Research and Information Systems Division for population estimates at the local government level in Montana. At the same time, an attempt has been made to collect state and county population estimates made over the past several decades and combine them into one major source of information.

One should use extreme caution in using the estimates presented in this publication, as they are only the end result of mathematical manipulations and presumptions on the part of several persons. However, every attempt has been made to insure that the estimates do give some insight as to the actual population living in a community. Moreover, presenting a well-documented set of estimates allows one a reference source for studies involving local governments.

The Research and Information Systems Division would like to thank the Superintendent of Public Instruction for supplying school enrollment data and the Bureau of Records and Statistics in the Montana Department of Health and Environmental Sciences for supplying this Division with vital statistical data.

The data contained in this document, and all the data that were used to develop the city estimates, are available for a small processing fee on magnetic tape or cards.

METHODOLOGY

A. State Estimates

Population estimates for the State of Montana from 1950 to 1975 were obtained from various reports (P-25 series) published by the U.S. Bureau of Census, from unpublished data prepared by the Bureau of Business and Economic Research at the University of Montana for the Montana Department of Health, and by linear interpolation for the years 1951, 1953, 1959, 1962, and 1969. Since the general methodology for estimating state population totals has varied over the estimating period (1950 to 1975) no attempt will be made to describe each type in this report. Furthermore, because of these changes in methodology, one is cautioned in using these estimates for comparison purposes. A detailed description of the methodology currently being used to estimate state population totals can be found in the U.S. Bureau of Census Report Number 615, Series P-25, issued in November of 1975.

B. County Estimates

The county estimates were obtained from reports (P-26) published by the Bureau of Census, from unpublished data prepared by the Bureau of Business and Economic Research at the University of Montana, and by linear interpolation for the years 1951, 1953, 1959, 1962 and 1969. The methods used for estimating county population vary from simple censal-ratio techniques used in the 1950's to the current method of averaging the results of three complex methods. A detailed explanation of these methods can be found in the Bureau of Census publication, Current Population Reports, number 75-26, series P-26, issued in June 1976. The county estimates for 1971-1975 conform with the estimates published in the Bureau of Census P-26 series with the exception of Rosebud County. The Rosebud County figures have been changed to reflect the rapid growth since 1971 and to agree with the special census taken in this county in 1975. Also, the county estimates for 1975 in Golden Valley, Petroleum, Treasure, and Wibaux have been changed to agree with the special census taken in these counties in late 1975. The remaining county estimates have been rounded to the nearest 100 and they are provisional as defined in the P-26 series report.

C. City Estimates

These estimates were prepared for all incorporated cities in Montana. In most cases, two methods were used and the results were then averaged to obtain a final estimate. In each case, the county estimates described in the preceding section were used as control totals so that all the restrictions placed on the county estimates, as described in the P-26 report, are also valid for the city estimates. Moreover, since the 1975 county estimates are provisional, so are the 1975 city estimates. The two methods averaged to obtain the final estimate are described as follows:

Method A—School Enrollment Ratio Method
This method uses city and county elementary school enrollment data to estimate the city's population. These estimates (say, for 1975) are made in the following manner:

$$PT2 = (ST2 \times SC1 \times PT1 \times PC2) \div (ST1 \times SC2 \times PC1)$$

Where
PT1 = City Population in 1970
PT2 = City Population in 1975
ST1 = City Elementary School Enrollment in 1970
ST2 = City Elementary School Enrollment in 1975
SC1 = County Elementary School Enrollment in 1970
SC2 = County Elementary School Enrollment in 1975
PC1 = County Population in 1970
PC2 = County Population in 1975

Basically this method uses elementary school enrollment for measuring the growth rate of a city. If elementary school enrollment within a city increases more than the county elementary school enrollment for any given year this would imply that the city is growing at a faster rate than the county. The problems encountered in using this type of estimate are in the data (elementary school enrollment figures are not always accurate and quite often do not coincide with the physical boundaries that define the city) and the assumption that population changes can be predicted from school enrollment changes.

Method B—Regression on Ratios

Regression equations were developed for different sized cities, using percent of 1970 county population as the dependent variable. The independent variables were the city's percent of county school enrollment (based on 1970 data), the city's percent of county births (based on 2-year sums, 1969 and 1970) and the city's percent of county deaths (based on 2-year sums, 1969 and 1970). Separate equations were built for those cities with population between 500 and 1000, between 1000 and 2500, and those whose population was greater than 2500. For cities with 1970 population less than 500, a simple ratio technique using county growth was employed.

Once both Method A and Method B were applied to all cities within a given county, the remaining population of the county was estimated, averaging estimates obtained by Method A and a simple ratio technique using county growth. The city estimates were then summed, added to the remaining population estimate, and compared to the county estimates described in Section B. If this sum was different than the county estimates, the city estimates and the remainder of the county were proportionately adjusted to equal the county total.

After estimates were obtained for all cities in Montana, a year-by-year inspection was made for each set of estimates within a county. These estimates were then adjusted if they looked out of line, or if it was felt that they did not estimate the population very well.

D. Multi-County Estimates

Multi-county estimates were obtained by simply summing up the counties within each particular region. A map of the multi-county districts is on the inside back cover.
